Council Tax is frozen again

GREENWICH Council's part of the Council Tax was frozen for the sixth time in 12 years at a full council meeting last Wednesday (February 24). The decision also includes the freezing of a range of sports and play group fees and charges across the borough, a record that council leader Chris Roberts believes is unequalled in London.

He said: "I'm pleased to announce that again this year the council is freezing council tax. This is a record we are proud of - and keeping council tax bills down has not come at the expense of fewer or poorer quality services. As a council we remain committed to ambitious regeneration, and developing services which meet the needs of current and future generations."

Cllr Roberts talked about the council's determination to keep on track its plans to transform Greenwich and raise the aspirations and achievement of residents. He said: "We have tackled unemployment head on by offering 250 local people jobs for up to a year. This includes community warden jobs to improve the environment in our town centres and housing estates.

"We also have a large programme funded through the National Future Jobs Fund, creating 1,000 six-month job placements to offer local unemployed people the skills, training and experience to find long-term employment. And he huge success of the DLR Woolwich extension has seen over five million passengers in its first year alone."

really special

DID you know that since April, 2008, if it has been necessary for you to be referred to see a specialist by your GP, you have been able to choose to go to any hospital in England?

This includes any private or independent sector hospital. You can choose the hospital with the best reputation, the first available appointment or simply the hospital that is most convenient for you dependant on your circumstances.

You can also choose a date and time for your appointment to fit your lifestyle. Help is available in choosing the right hospital by either consulting your GP, a Patient Choice Adviser, NHS direct or by going to www.nhs.uk or www.choice.nhs.uk where you can read about the hospitals available, get information about consultants, car parking facilities, waiting times, infection rates and cleanliness.

Once you have chosen where to go for your treatment you can book your own appointment on line at www.healthspace.nhs.uk or by ringing the appropriate number of your chosen provider which will be found on the paperwork the GP has given you. Now anyone who is referred for treatment will be treated within 18 weeks from when the referral is activated. Although the NHS will do its best to make sure treatment is as quick and convenient as possible here are some tips about what you can do to help:

- Be ready for your appointment
  - Look to improve your lifestyle (stopping smoking and eat healthily)
  - Keep your contact details up to date.
  - Keep the appointments you have chosen or ensure you cancel and rebook.
  - Let us know if you do not want to carry on with a treatment.
- More information is available on www.18weeks.nhs.uk or www.healthspace.nhs.uk

Good response to Scamnesty push

SCAMNESTY month officially ended on February 26, but don't worry if you haven't had the chance to 'Drop in to drop them in it' yet - it's not too late to pop scam mailings into the special bins around the borough. The Town Hall in Wellington Street has its big yellow bin until the end of this week and the local authorities would welcome any more dubious mail that may have been received by local residents. It is estimated that fewer than five per cent of around three million victims report their experiences and would urge any possible scams to be reported so that offenders can be dealt with. There has been a good response to the campaign, particularly regarding spam emails, according to Greenwich trading standards. There are eight bins in libraries around the borough, as well as the one at Woolwich Town Hall which will be collected on Friday. Alternatively residents can email the trading standards team on: tradingstandards@greenwich.gov.uk or phone Consumer Direct on 08454 040506 or visit www.consumerdirect.gov.uk

k/scamnesty Cllr Maureen O'Mara, member for neighbourhood services said: "I'm very pleased that Greenwich residents have responded to well to this campaign because it's an issue that affects so many of us. It is important that any spam mailings are brought to the attention of the trading standards team so that offenders can be dealt with."

facilities

by Rod Kitson

WITH the 2012 London Olympics just a hop, skip and a jump away, world-class triple jumper Jonathan Edwards unveiled a state-of-the-art fitness suit at a Greenwich school.

The gym at St. Paul's Academy in Abbey Wood was opened by the Olympic gold medallist on February 23, and he gave the sports school and its new facility a resounding thumbs up.

He told GT: "There are two things really important in sports, one is having really good, motivated staff - which St. Paul's has - the other is having facilities like this. The kids here have the best of both worlds and it's absolutely fantastic."

The athlete gave an inspirational pep talk to the GCSE students at the school on Finchale Road, and added: "Sport can have an impact on all young people's lives, not just the really talented ones, and here there is the capacity to do that - it's a great model for others to follow."

The jumper admitted it was a far cry from the conditions he trained under as a boy.

"You couldn't even begin to compare the two," he said. "Even when I was competing at the highest international level, the facilities were not up to this level."

The £150,000 facility includes rowing machines, weights, exercise bikes and even a Nintendo Wii, which will be used by some of the athletes at the 2012 Games, as well as students at the academy.

Cllr John Fahy, cabinet member for culture and Olympics, said: "It's going to be amazing having the Olympics in the borough. These students are going to have all the top athletes in the world on their doorstep and it's going to be really inspiring for them.

"We've got top-quality fitness machines, some of which will be used in the Olympics, and we want students to enjoy it too."

The school's director of sport Niall McCann said: "My dream is for a pupil to go from the playground to the podium, which is a scheme I've been working on to get young athletes interested in the elite side of sport."

There are plans to let local groups benefit from the new unit too. "Eventually we're going to be introducing it to the community where clubs can come in," said Niall. "We've got teachers coming in here at 7am to use the equipment, and some staying until seven at night to use it."

Homes to roost

First new council houses in London on the way

CONSTRUCTION work has begun on the first new council homes to be built under a £500m government programme.

Greenwich Council is the first local authority in London to build new council homes under the Local Authority Housing Building Programme.

Last Friday digging began at the site of Woodlands Park Road, Greenwich, for the construction of six semi-detached houses. The homes will be let through Greenwich Homes - the council's letting service and will be available for rent to larger families in housing need.

The four and five-bed homes are among 63 in Greenwich which are being funded with a £6.1m grant from the scheme.

The grants were announced by the Homes and Communities Agency, which administers the scheme on behalf of the government, after two successful bidding rounds by Greenwich Council.

The first grant will fund 47 homes on eight sites across the borough while the second will fund 16 homes on a further four sites. Work is expected to be completed within 12 months.

The council's deputy leader Peter Brooks and Cllr Maureen O'Mara, the council's cabinet member for neighbourhood services, were on site to see the start of work last week.

Cllr Brooks said: "Greenwich has a very good track record in attracting investment to help build new affordable homes for families in housing need. That success has been developed through forging strong partnerships with both housing associations and private developers, and has helped ensure that thousands of new homes have been built, many of them on once-relic sites that are being brought back to life. "It's excellent news that this government programme is also enabling us to build our own homes for rent."

Cllr O'Mara said: "The new homes will make an important contribution to the housing needs of local families and I'm particularly pleased that we'll be able to expand the supply of family homes for larger households."

She added: "These new homes are being built at the same time as we near the conclusion of our Decent Homes investment programme which has installed improvements for thousands of existing council tenants in the borough."

Court dishes up £20,000 fine to dirty restaurant

INADEQUATE food hygiene cost a Chinese restaurant £20,000 in fines and costs.

The Peninsula Chinese restaurant, in Bugsby's Way, Charlton, was fined £13,500 for food hygiene offences and ordered to pay costs of £6,800 for Greenwich Council.

Restaurant owners pleaded guilty to nine summonses under the hygiene regulations act during an appearance at Woolwich Magistrates Court on February 15.

The case followed an unannounced inspection by environmental health officers from Greenwich Council who took photographic evidence which was presented in court.

During their visit, the kitchen was found to have dirty equipment, walls, floor and ventilation ducting. Food storage containers were in a poor state of repair and had failed to protect food from contamination in the refrigerator.

There were also inadequate procedures to control pests and mouse droppings were found in the storage areas while the general cleanliness of the premises was below standard.

Cllr Maureen O'Mara, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for neighbourhood services, said: "The Council will continue to carry out unannounced visits to food businesses and will take necessary action to safeguard customers' health. It is essential that food businesses take all the appropriate steps to ensure general food hygiene standards are met."

● Food businesses that would like to make sure they are complying with the law or to see if they may be eligible for free training or other support can contact the council's environmental health team on 020 8921 8186 for advice.

Vital to oppose violence

IT'S refreshing to see the Violent Organised Crime Unit taking pre-emptive action against serious crime.

Often in the past the police have lacked the initiative to stop violent crime before it occurs but your article suggests that thankfully this is being reversed.

Also encouraging are the on-going efforts to involve the community in prevention. The problem of violent crime is not just the responsibility of the police but as the charge of the general public. It is unrealistic to expect the VOCU to be able to achieve real results without the help of local people and for this reason it is imperative that it becomes easier and safer for individuals to report crime when they see it.

We need to build on the support system for witnesses where reporting is less bureaucratic and more importantly safer as to encourage more people to come forward with information.

I think the Support Through Early Intervention scheme mentioned is a good start. None of us likes the idea of violence and it's vital to oppose those who have the opposite point of view.

Keep it good...

I WANTED to write you a congratulatory note. I have just finished reading the 9 Feb issue and came across a handful of really interesting pieces about Greenwich organisations helping folks in need. I especially liked your coverage of Kuldish, a young girl from Charlton who got a job at The O2 through the GLLaB scheme. In this climate, it is very comforting to see those eager to learn and better themselves being helped into work by the council. Equally, the note about Odette getting back into work after long-term sickness was touching and should give everyone hope. Please continue writing about all the good things that happen in Greenwich!!!

E. Escobar, Greenwich

● THANK you so much for including my opinion piece in last week's GT - I can't imagine any other local newspaper being so on the ball - but, as my old friends from Greenwich have been quick to point out to me, I now live in Felixstowe. Keep up the environmental work!

John French

But what about drafty doors?

HOW I agree with D.M. Mack from Eltham about how we who have had our homes brought up to date under the Decent Homes Scheme have had double glazing, new kitchens, rewiring and central heating installed. But the old front doors are still letting in the drafts so that I am spending my pension on keeping my room vaguely warm.

L. Richardson, Kidbrooke

● COUNCIL officers will be in touch to arrange an inspection of your home, Ms

Richardson, and you will be advised on a range of energy efficiency issues which may also help. You will also be advised of the options with regard to grants that could assist you in the provision of insulation in your home. Ed.

ALL AT SEA...

I'M emailing this on Friday afternoon - February 26 - and I don't even know it will get into your newspaper, which I read assiduously every week for Kevin Nolan's match reports. You've guessed - I'm on my way to Southend for another "massive" game for the Addicks. By the time your readers read this, the result will be "history" but please go back to the future and hope that I'm on my way to a victory!

CENTRE OF ATTRACTION: Page estate residents can't wait to make the most of their own community centre

Family fun day sets the standard for community centre

FAMILIES on the Page Estate, Eltham, got the chance to say what they want from their new community centre – and have loads of fun at the same time.

The event was a family fun day organised by members of the Page Estate Action Project, a community group set up by residents to campaign for a new community centre. Supported by Greenwich Council, it was held on Saturday, February 20, at the Scout Hall in Brisset Road and attracted locals of all ages.

People were able to view the plans for the £715,000 centre – funded by Greenwich Council – talk to members of the action group and give feedback on a 'Graffiti Wall', where they could scribble their comments. "We ran family-focused activities to bring in both adults and young people so that we could talk with them about the new centre," said Lee Abbott, chair of the Page Estate Action Project. "We want to involve local people from the very beginning."

Residents also helped to choose the new name for the centre – with three-quarters of votes going to 'Turning Pages' (across the ages), the winning entry submitted by pupils from the nearby Ealldham

by Dick Townsend-Smith

Primary School.

Eltham MP Clive Efford joined members of the council's Youth Inclusion Panel from Children's Services to help with the activities, supported by Police Community Support Officers (PCSOs) and local community wardens.

Activities included employment and training advice from GLLaB and Greenwich Community College, healthy eating information from Greenwich Food Co-op, volunteering opportunities from Volunteer Centre Greenwich, eco-gardening talks, photography and life coaching, plus face painting and a bouncy castle for the youngsters. Free fruit, drinks and sweets were also handed out.

Charlton Athletic will be involved with young people's activities at the centre, and questionnaires were handed out so youngsters could give their suggestions.

The Page Estate Action Project was set up by residents who have been campaigning for the centre. Building work got going after the funding from Greenwich Council.

Work is now well underway, and the single-storey centre is due to open in April. It will have two multi-function rooms, a kitchen space which is hoped will be used for an internet cafe, and a crèche.

There will also be a small shop selling sweets and everyday items, as well as office space.

The centre will be managed by volunteers and members of the Action Project management committee who hope to open it every day of the week.

"The aim is to draw in all sections of the community and to fill the gaps in local provision," said Lee. "We will run activities for all ages, particularly young people, families and senior citizens. With the help of the local community we are sure the centre will be a great success. "We are absolutely thrilled to bits that finally the Page Estate is getting a community centre of its own that will benefit everyone."

● If you would like to run activities from the centre or get involved in volunteering opportunities, contact Charissa Fiander from the Kidbrooke Project Team on 020-8921 6231.

SE9 plans to party for 2012

by Hilary Bryan

PUBLICAN Derek Moore was one of the first to organise a celebration when it was announced that Greenwich was to become a royal borough.

Regulars at The Old Post Office in Passey Place, Eltham, gathered for a lunchtime drink and Derek started planning events for the run up to 2012 when royal borough status is officially bestowed by the Queen.

The local businessman is Eltham born and bred, fiercely proud of the area and quick to point out that Eltham was actually a borough in its own right at one time.

He hopes that royal borough status as well as the 2012 Olympic Games will help to throw worldwide focus on Eltham's many historical and architectural landmarks.

"There are so many gems and so much history in Eltham but we often get left off the map. We have Eltham Palace, fabulous parkland and places like the Coronet cinema - a beautiful art deco building," he enthused.

Born at the old Memorial Hospital, Derek went to Wyborne primary and Shooters

Hill Grammar school before a 30-year career in advertising and marketing.

He's been doing his little bit to bring people into the area since he took over the Post Office pub in May last year. "I've visited many pubs and worked in a couple over the years and felt Eltham deserved a community pub again - a place where families could enjoy good food, a good atmosphere and entertainment," explained Derek who runs the pub with partners Sheila Byfield and Una Court. The pub runs a Jazz afternoon on the first Sunday of the month and local musicians are welcome to perform during the open mic session. "Karaoke has had its day and we want to encourage local talent by holding live music events with local musicians," said Derek.

The Greenwich and Bexley Hospice, Demelza, the children's hospice and Help for Heroes are among the charities supported by the pub and Derek confirmed: "We've got lots of plans and there are lots of events and special days to look forward to in the future."

And in the area generally? "The new green wardens are a good initiative and a lot of the empty shops are starting to be re-occupied. There are rumours of a hotel on the site at the start of Court Road and that would be fantastic for the area but I'd really like to know what's happening to the old cinema at Well Hall," said the dad-of-two.

"We'd certainly welcome a DLR extension - even a Tube or a tram - as that would help to reduce traffic.

Eltham is a bottleneck when there's a problem with the Blackwall Tunnel or the A2 and that's not good for the environment."

More services restored at community venue

MORE services are coming back into operation at the Eltham Centre following a fire last month.

The blaze broke out in the mechanical plant and electrical systems on February 13. Since then staff the community venue in Archery Road have been working hard to restore services.

The library remains open every day allowing residents to pick up and drop off library books.

Internet services are also now back up and running.

The main reception area is still closed, so advice and information services are operating from the Teen Zone in the library.

Volunteer constables' crucial role for police

SPECIAL constables and volunteers were praised by a senior officer at a get-together at Plumstead police station.

Superintendent Chris Hafford told GT: "Volunteers play a crucial role in how we work in Greenwich. They volunteer their time to support us in policing the borough and give us feedback about how we are doing."

"The advice they give helps us to build better links with our local community and demonstrates how open the Metropolitan Police Service is. We are grateful for their work and support and hope to encourage more local people to join us."

The longest serving volunteer in Greenwich is 35-year-old Canadian Krista Thomas. She said: "I have been volunteering with the Met for three years and have been working at Eltham police station's front counter."

"Volunteering for me means that I get an inside view of the service. It is a pleasure to see good practice of community policing first hand. I would recommend it as a worthwhile way of spending spare time."

Special constables worked to keep the town centre safe during National Specials Week.

They patrolled the town centre and set up a stand in Greenwich Market where they spoke to over 50 people about becoming special constables.

Greenwich specials manager Sergeant Sohrab Peerbaccus told GT: "Specials give up their time to do something good for their community. They are part of the policing family in Greenwich and I am proud to work alongside them whilst they contribute to policing and making London safer."

Vicky Cunningham, 28, said: "I joined because I wanted to make a difference and acquire some new skills. I worked over 500 hours last year and would recommend becoming a special to anyone who fancies a new challenge whilst volunteering."

Cllr Maureen O'Mara, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for neighbourhood services, said: "Specials do a wonderful job in Greenwich and we should all be very proud of them. There is indeed a special form of volunteering and I hope others are inspired to join them."

My kingdom for a take-away!

"TAKE aways! Take aways! My kingdom for a take away!"

Food has rarely been far from my thoughts this fortnight. My last thought at night is of the 1700 calories that I can have the next day and my first waking thought is breakfast. It's been harder to keep motivated lately and, at times, it has felt as though my weight loss target is miles off.

But I haven't given up. I paid for my summer holiday recently and I want to be slim and toned in time for it. I'd like to be able to go swimming and splash about in the pool without worrying that my bouncing man-boobs will repulse the other swimmers! I know that if I give up now, I'll just slip back into roly-poly territory. I don't want to look like a hippo in shorts on my holiday!

To keep up my fight with the flab this fortnight, I have done as much walking as possible and have kept up with my gym visits. I even found myself attending a Latino Aerobics class at the Eltham Centre (before the unfortunate fire). In the run up to going I grew increasingly anxious, paranoid and irrational. I had never been to an aerobics class before and had no idea what to expect. I worked myself up into a frenzied state. Would I humiliate myself? Would I be the only man there? Would I have to spend an hour being laughed at by the equivalent of a roomful of TV's 'Loose Women' panellists? It took an awful lot of courage to get myself there. I was terrified. In fact I think I sweated more before the class than during it!

When I arrived at the Dawn, who made it clear that it was an informal class - it was OK to go wrong. So I threw caution to the wind and gave it 100 per cent. I sashayed and cha-cha-cha'd through the 45-minute class and found, to my amazement, that I was mostly in time with the others. I was getting it right! The class is geared to all abilities and the routines are developed steadily over in. It's tough to see other passengers indulging when you know you don't have enough calories left to join them. In such circumstances, I reassure myself that I'm better off without the snacks. As the old adage says, "little pickers wear bigger knickers."

Then in the hotel room, with only the TV for company, my mind wondered to food. Vending machines and bar snacks are all within easy reach. Then there's the cooked breakfast buffets. Before, I'd just dive in like a child at Christmas and stuff my face - it's no wonder I developed the frame of an apprentice sumo wrestler! Fortunately, there were plenty of inspirational moments on the trip too. As I stood in front of the full-length mirror in my room I realised just how much my body has transformed over the last six weeks. My tummy has shrunk beyond belief! The second boost came when trying on a new T-shirt in a shop changing room and, shock horror, it actually looked nice! For once I didn't look like an overstuffed sausage skin! I'm getting there...

● How are YOU doing in your efforts? Email: deanbeadle@yahoo.com

The first being the refreshment trolley on the train - it swung back and forth like a pendulum of allurements - enticing me in. It's tough to see other passengers indulging when you don't have enough calories left to join them class, the first thing I noticed was how much the ladies were enjoying each other's company. There was a really light-hearted and fun atmosphere among them. It was clear that the class was also a wonderful socialising opportunity for them. Then I noticed not one, but two men with them. I wasn't on my own!

I was still feeling self-conscious as the class started up, but was soon put at ease by the encouraging instructor, the session which makes it far easier to keep up with. It's a real high energy workout - you definitely feel that you are burning those calories off. I had a great time.

This fortnight I worked in Newcastle, and had to stay overnight there. The visit was peppered with endless temptation. The first being the refreshment trolley on the train - it swung back and forth past my seat like a pendulum of allurements - enticing me

Students say how Olympics should help borough

EIGHT Greenwich students have been chosen to represent the borough in making important decisions on how the community should benefit from the 2012 Olympics and what happens afterwards.

The students, from Greenwich Community College in Plumstead Road and the London Leisure College in Eltham, are called the Legacy Champions, and were picked from 20 students who applied. The five Community College students are Dushane Morris, 17, Stacie Gormon, 16, Caitlin-Nico Morton, 17, Joy Tontoh, 19, and Victoria Nwabiakam, 18.

Representing the Leisure College are Myles Warren, 18, Jade Elston, 18, and Charlie Fordree, 17.

"They were chosen after submitting applications explaining what they want from the Olympic Park after the Games," said Alec Brand, head of marketing at the community college, who judged the applications

by Dick Townsend-Smith

with vice-principal Bob Tragheim and director of student services Andy Smith.

"We were looking for ideas that not only touched the sporting element but also the social and community aspects, promoting the benefits of the Olympics and Paralympics both in the college and the local community."

Andy added: "I nominated the students who showed a spark of something different, with wide-ranging ideas that covered the wider perspective, such as equality, access and older people or those with disabilities or with lower incomes."

The eight students joined other students from 6th

Form colleges in the other four Olympic host boroughs to take part in a Legacy Champions day at NewVic College's Stratford Circus centre on Monday last week (February 22). There, they planned to collate their ideas formally and present them to Darren Letford, Senior Olympics Officer in the Mayor's Office.

Also on the programme was a visit to the Olympic Park View Tube observation station.

"We aim to ensure that the voices of our students are heard by the Olympic Park Legacy Company and LOCOG, the organising committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games led by Lord Coe," said Alec.

"The Legacy Champions event is a ground-breaking opportunity that brings together students and gives them an opportunity to shape the 2012 legacy."

During the day students took part in workshops, activities and discussions and presented their views to key decision-makers.

In the afternoon a motivational speech was expected from four-time Paralympic swimmer Dervis Konuralp with the opportunity to hear from and ask questions to six-time Olympian Tessa Sanderson.

But the students' role does not end there. They will work with the Legacy Company later in the year, and act as the link to channel local views through to the decision-makers. Once the students move on from college a new generation of Legacy Champions will be appointed to keep the torch of the Olympic and Paralympic values alight.

IDEAS PEOPLE: Getting ready to champion the legacy of 2012 are students Myles Warren, Caitlin-Nico Morton and Dushane Morris

Electronic medical records set to improve patient care

PATIENTS will get faster and safer treatment thanks to hi tech plans to record their medical notes electronically. Essential medical history will be put on an electronic summary care record under a new initiative designed to improve patient care. The summary care records include vital information about patients such as allergies, medications and any previous adverse reactions to medicines. Having the information available electronically means doctors and nurses in A&E departments, walk-in centres, and GP out-of-hours services, have the most up-to-date information at hand in situations where time is critical and could save lives. The new electronic records are being rolled out across the capital as part of a national NHS IT programme to provide better, safer patient care. So far 29 of London's 31 primary care trusts, seven out of ten mental health trusts and seven acute trusts are using electronic patient record systems. From this month, patients over 16 who are registered with a Greenwich GP will receive an information pack explaining how summary care records work. They will also be offered a choice to opt out of having a summary care record. The electronic records will be created in the next 12-18 months and patients will be able to view them on Healthspace, a secure website at www.healthspace.nhs.uk Jane Schofield, Chief Executive of NHS Greenwich, said: "Summary care records will improve the quality of patient care by giving faster, easier access to reliable information to help with treatment, particularly in emergency situations. "They will also give those patients on lots of different medications, or those with long-term conditions, real peace of mind knowing that important information is accessible when it is needed." ● Patients can get more details about summary care records from the NHS Care Records Service information line on 0845 603 8510 (local rates apply) or visit the website at www.nhs.uk/records

Front door to i

KEEPING your independence and continuing to make your own choices is the ideal situation as you get older. With this in mind, Greenwich Council is teaming up with partners from housing and health to create new-style "extra care" sheltered schemes. PAT GREENWOOD was invited to meet some of the residents who have their own front-door and support if they need it...

GLADYS Hollidge, 80, has been friends with 89-year-old Nell Powell for half her life, and they've been neighbours both on the Connaught Estate and in Defiance Walk, Woolwich, for years.

Now Gladys and Nell need that extra care. So Greenwich Council and Gallions Housing Association have put their heads together and fixed them up with adjoining flats in Lakeview Court, alongside Thamesmead leisure centre, off Central Way.

Gladys, who worked in the canteen at Woolwich Arsenal, has trouble walking without a frame, and Nell is frail. However, they still enjoy the short walk down to the shops.

Gladys said: "This is all right for us. We like to go to one another's places."

Danny Rampton, 64, used to manage a hotel in Lancashire. "This looked just like a hotel when I first came to see it!" he told us.

Danny, also from Woolwich, has suffered from progressive muscular atrophy since he was aged 14. He likes being able to use Lakeview's buggy store to charge up his "wheels".

And Danny, who is the first chair of the scheme's residents' association, added: "I like my flat. It's much bigger than the one I had before."

Sylvia Houldsworth, 82, a retired tie-maker, enjoys having her hair done in Lakeview's salon. She said: "I only go when it gets a bit untidy. I also have a little trot round to the shops, and I go to my son's at the weekend."

Some of the residents in the new schemes need more help than others. Anne Crowder, 51, has had multiple sclerosis since her late thirties. She has moved from residential care in Kidbrooke to Greenwich Council's newly-refurbished Richard Neve House on Plumstead High Street.

She relies on Greenwich Council's 'GESS' team - short for Greenwich enablement support services. But she told us: "I have my own front door. I can change channels on my own TV, and I can use the phone to ring my mum every day in St Albans."

She enjoys talking to a blind lady further along her corridor. And she's already won a penguin in the raffle at one of the coffee mornings to add to her large soft toy collection.

Cecilia Graham, 73, is a former assistant care supervisor for mentally and physically handicapped adults. She was living alone in Blackheath until just before Christmas. She said: "I needed more company. I'm also on a lot of medication these days."

Cecilia has arthritis and both heart and blood sugar problems, and she told us: "The carers here complain that I don't ask them often enough for help!"

Dick 'n' chips

RICHARD Neve House, named after popular former Mayor 'Dick' Neve, has 43 flats - eight of for rehabilitation after a hospital stay. The project, built with cash support from the Department of Health and Greenwich Council, is an upgrade of a former Greenwich Council sheltered housing scheme of flats and bedsits. It was opened in October. Residents have started Friday fish-and-chip lunches, there's a Wednesday afternoon shopping bus and there are plans for up a doctors' surgery in the treatment room. Another 58-unit scheme on the site of the old Royal Military Academy, Shooters Hill - a partnership between the council and L & Q Housing Trust - is due for completion this summer.

RIGHT NEIGHBOURLY: Sharon Leadon, neighbourhood team manager for Greenwich Council, has a laugh in a Lakeview sun lounger with residents Nell Powell and Gladys Hollidge.

TAKING EXTRA CARE: Anne Crowder, who has MS, needs help from Greenwich enablement support services to enjoy her flat to the full. Meanwhile, Sylvia Houldsworth was getting her hair done. Cecilia Graham, a former professional carer, needs a little help now, and Danny Rampton showed off Lakeview's buggy-store where "wheels" can be charged up

Independence

Tranquil by the lake

LAKEVIEW COURT comprises 58 one and two-bedroomed flats, available specifically for Greenwich residents. It's Gallions' first "extra care" scheme. Camilla Medhurst, head of Neighbourhood Services at Gallions, said: "This is a really exciting scheme. We wanted a tranquil setting, and one that was close to local amenities too. With 80 per cent of the flats being let within the first week, it shows that there is demand for this type of development."

Lakeview opened last summer, complete with donations of a piano and a pool table. Two of the lounges have picture-windows, overlooking the lake, as well as an IT suite and laundry. There's also a button-push bath which wraps around you! The scheme's environmentally friendly features include low-rise "green" roofs where residents can monitor the progress of the plants, as well as a state-of-the-art boiler which runs on rapeseed.

● AGE Concern is the largest support charity in the borough working with older people and their carers. Visit: www.acgreenwich.org.uk Paid helpers are available for everything from shopping and gardening to maintenance around the home. (or Consumer Direct can also help you choose the right tradesperson. Ring 08454 040506).

Age Concern also runs regular information and advice sessions throughout Greenwich to help with benefits, housing, safety and security at home, consumer and health issues. Find your nearest advice surgery by ringing 020-8294 0881. Age Concern House in Sherard Road, Eltham, runs drop-ins on Tuesdays and Thursdays. It also has a day centre for older people who are physically frail. There's a hairdresser, and appointments aren't always necessary. Fruit and veg is on sale from Wednesday to Friday. There are also outings and trips to parks, cinemas and restaurants. House Boyle Housein Charlton is a day centre for older people with mild to moderate dementia. Transport can be arranged to both day-centres. Find out more about Age Concern's "Supporting People" service - helping you to live independently in your own home - on 020-8294 3010. Details of regular lunchclubs in Plumstead and at the Blackheath Standard on the same number. There's also a "Fit as a Fiddle" programme, focusing on fun and enjoyment. Call 020-8294 3017. Also a Healthy Living Programme: find out more from the charity's senior nutritional advisor on 020-8294 3013. For foot care, you'll need a referral from your GP. You can also contact 020-8836 4290 for an assessment.

● OLDER people able to get out and about can try a different activity every day. It's thanks to the "Club Wellness" programme running at council venues from Thamesmead to Eltham, and operated by Greenwich Leisure Limited (GLL). There's singing, swimming, ballroom and tap-dancing as well as racquet sports, indoor bowls, badminton and tennis, and a whole lot more. You don't have to be a GLL member. For more information contact the Club Wellness co-ordinator on 020-8317 5010 ext. 2700. You can also pick up the latest day-by-day activities leaflet from your nearest leisure centre. Greenwich Community Games provide free swimming lessons for over-60s each week in the GLL leisure centres. Contact Community-Games@greenwich.gov.uk Scores of locals are enjoying the programmes. Greenwich have been champions of the interborough Club Wellness Games for the last four years.

Call to find more

ANY older Greenwich resident who wants to find out more should ring the council's Extra Care Administrator on 020-8921 2692. You will need to have a care plan already in place, and new residents are also given a support plan, detailing convenient times for a daily call, and encouraging participation in health and social activities within their new housing scheme. There's also help available with budgeting, as well as welfare rights and benefits claims.

Greenwich Council's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

Edition 174

How the lettings policy works

Housing applicants are placed within 'Bands' according to the Council's policy for letting homes. Your band information is on the letter that the Council sent you when you registered, or when your circumstances changed.

Property adverts say which band can apply and any other criteria. When all the bids are received, the property is then offered to:

For properties advertised for band A and band B - the applicant who has had this priority status for the longest time.

For properties advertised for band C applicants - the applicant who has been registered on the Council's list for the longest time.

Band

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the council must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.
- C is for all applicants on the housing register, including those that are in priority bands A and B.

How do I apply?

1 Get on the list

First, you've got to be on the housing waiting list to join the scheme. If you're not, get an application form by phoning the Access and Allocations Section on 020 8921 2941. Or pick up a form from any neighbourhood office.

2 Find your applicant number

It will be on the letter you've already had from the Council about the new scheme. You'll need that number and the reference number of the property you're after, which will be on the advert.

3 Pick out your ideal property

by looking in Greenwich Time or regularly checking the website:

www.greenwich.gov.uk/homes

Click on your preference on the website. If you don't have a computer, you can always use one for free in either your neighbourhood housing office, library or UK Online centre.

4 Apply in one of two ways

- Phone the 24-hour hotline 020 8921 4340. It's an automatic push-button system and calls will be charged at the normal local rate, or
- Via the Council's website

Best Buddys

Over the years there have been many successful portrayals of rock 'n' roll forerunner, Buddy Holly. Now he's A Legend Reborn, with a show which comes to Greenwich later this month

WHEN Buddy Holly sang 'That'll be the day when I die' he could hardly have imagined his prophecy would be realised so soon.

The prolific singer-songwriter was just 22 when the plane he had chartered for a tour of America's Midwest crashed on February 3, 1959, killing everyone on board.

Don McLean later sang that it was 'The day the music died', but in reality, Buddy Holly's music has stood the test of time and endures to this day. Ok, so it may be missing McLean's point, but in the few short years of his life, the Texan rock 'n' roller penned classics that include Peggy Sue, Oh Boy, That'll Be The Day, and many more.

And the star of a musical tribute to the singer which comes to Greenwich later this month, Marc Robinson, thinks the lasting appeal of the artist is down to his simple songs.

"Sometimes, it's the simple ones that are the most difficult to get right," he told Scene. "They were just great songs. Had he lived longer he would have rivalled Lennon and McCartney as the best songwriter of all time."

Arguably, even without the blessing of longer life, his legacy is up there with the haloed efforts of John and Paul, and such was his influence on the young Liverpudlians that they eventually named themselves The Beatles in homage to Holly's, The Crickets. Buddy Holly - A Legend Reborn hits the Indigo2 on March 18, and lead man Marc was into Holly's music long before he landed the role. "I've always been a big fan," he said, "and I was in a tribute band locally before I got the part."

Win tickets to A Legend Reborn

Scene has two pairs of tickets to this great stage show to give away. To be in with a chance of winning just answer this question:

What is the name of the Don McLean song that references Buddy Holly's death?

Send answers on a postcard with your name, address and contact number marked 'Buddy Holly comp' to Communications, Woolwich Town Hall, Wellington Street, SE18 6PW or email competitions@greenwich.gov.uk Competition ends on March 8 subject for film and stage shows - few better than Gary Busey's note perfect portrayal in The Buddy Holly Story on the big screen in 1978, a faithful re-working of which went on to the West End stage - where it stays to this day. And in 1985, Paul McCartney showed his deep-rooted admiration for the rock 'n' roller, when he hosted his own all-singing all-dancing tribute, calling it, somewhat pompously, The Real Buddy Holly Story.

So there have been many incarnations, and A Legend Reborn keeps to the tried and tested format of plenty of tunes and less of the chat. "There is dialogue, but mostly the story is told through the music," said Marc, who is credited as the country's top Buddy tribute performer, and who won TV talent contest, Stars In Their Eyes for his double take impersonation.

"I bring authenticity to the part," he added. "I originally started performing as Buddy and people said that I looked just like him." The performer's extensive knowledge of the singer helped him to get his interpretation spot on, and the period piece should be a real trip down memory lane for fans of the era. Marc enthused: "The performance is like 'the show they never gave' - it's a two-hour show featuring all the hits as well as slots from his contemporaries of the time, The Big Bopper, Richie Valens, The Everly Brothers and Connie Francis."

Rod Kitson

A Legend Reborn is on at the Indigo2 at The O2 on Thursday March 18. Tickets are £26/24 Book at www.theo2.co.uk/indigo2 or call 0844 856 0202

2012 art man

Marathon under-taking

ART and sport are not the most comfortable bedfellows at the best of times.

A stereotypical view might be of the artist as a tortured soul, a self imposed exile in a squalid garret, booze-soaked tears falling on to an unmade bed of hardened paintbrushes and ashy fag-ends. A disciplined sportsman he is not. But wait, this isn't Dylan's idealised Sixties utopia, and perhaps sport and art can co-exist without the intrusion of corporate oafs and PowerPoint presentations... It's certainly the view of an artist who has masterminded a creative project that runs in perfect harmony with the upcoming 2012 Games.

Simon Pope's Memory Marathon was a large-scale participatory event in which the artist walked a specially planned 26-mile course through London's five Olympic boroughs and filmed the event for the resulting documentary film which is shown in Greenwich this weekend.

Continuing his series of walking and memory-themed projects, Pope completed the trek over a day aided by the company of over 100 local residents from Newham, Tower Hamlets, Hackney, Waltham Forest, and of course, Greenwich.

Starting out at dawn from Thamesmead, the artist was interviewed by locals as part of the film that will be shown at the Greenwich Picturehouse, as well as at other '5-Boroughs' cinemas.

Each of the 100 local residents accompanied Simon for 400 metres of the journey, interviewing him as they walked.

And with an age range of between eight and 82-years-old, the participants reflect a good cross section of the local communities the artist passed through.

Memory Marathon is shown at the Greenwich Picturehouse on Sunday March 7. To book call 0871 704 2059 or visit www.picturehouses.co.uk And if you can't make it, the film is looped at the Dray Walk Gallery off Brick Lane from March 5-14. Admission to the gallery is free.

FINAL SCENE

Beats and pieces

London-based Danes, Alphabeat unleash their latest album which promises their trademark blend of house, funk and pop

ALPHABEAT'S new album, The Beat Is, has its eyes dead set on the horizon and is full of great songs built on infectious retro-pop styles. You might have heard the Mantronix-like funk-pop of first single The Spell, but there's the slippery filter-house of DJ, the piano riff meets speaker-rattling bassline of next single, Hole In My Heart and the R&B touched, down-tempo reach of Q&A, too. You might go for Chess with its fantastically pointed opening line, "Baby let's quit playing chess, you've been to my address..." and pitch-bend vocal samples rarely heard since 1989. Right near the end of the record is the epic, euphoric bliss of The Right Thing where a Black Box style big piano screamer tumbles down a huge great chasm of a breakdown. No need for a remix – everything you'll ever need is right here. Alphabeat are special for a number of reasons. For one, they're from the Danish version of Motown – their hometown of Silkeborg is famous for its huge number of car dealerships. Another reason – there's loads of band members, six in fact. Anders SG sings, as does Stine, Anders B plays guitar and some keyboards and is a whizz in the studio. Rasmus is the band's resident keyboard player, Anders R plays bass and is another keyboard player while Troels is the drummer – without him, there would be nothing. They went to school together and aged fifteen (they're now all in their early 20s) and formed a band. They first moved to London in the summer of 2007 around the release of their debut top ten album This Is Alphabeat and the huge pop smashes and playlist staples Fascination, Boyfriend and 10,000 Nights. This is another infectious album from Alphabeat, and after the band's recent support slot on Lady GaGa's Monster Ball tour of the UK, the biggest star of the moment seems to think they're great too. Which can't be bad.

Andy Watson

Alphabeat, The Beat Is, is out now at HMV, Greenwich Shopping Park, Charlton

Mix and match with Micmacs

THE trailers say 'from the makers of Amélie' and I know that is a good thing generally. The only concern I have is that I saw Amélie and I can't for the life of me remember any of it. Still, a lot of good things are being said of Micmacs and only time will tell if they are right. Dany Boon, the French star of Micmacs (and a big star in his homeland) is claimed to be the new Charlie Chaplin, and on the evidence of this film he may be, but I always preferred Harold Lloyd myself. This is not to say Micmacs is not any good.

It's funny and visually colourful – and beautifully photographed as might be expected from the director Jean-Pierre Jeunet. It is in English, thank heavens, and the visual gags are great. The music is interesting too, as it is gleaned from the great film noirs of the late forties (the hero is a great fan of old films) and this is where Micmacs is at its best. It is a typically original take on life and the arms trade in the form of a bright and quirky film that is well worth a look.

Out at the Greenwich Odeon on February 26

Reader review: INVICTUS

WITH Clint Eastwood in the director's chair and Morgan Freeman as Nelson Mandela, not to mention the inspiring story of one man's struggle to unite a nation, one might have been justified in expecting a sure-fire success from Invictus and Oscar nominations aplenty. Disappointingly though, Eastwood ends up constructing an artificial re-run of the 1995 Rugby World Cup Finals, and which is particularly grating during the lack lustre crowd scenes.

Freeman – who is far too tall for the role, by the way – clearly put his acting energies into the accent at the expense of his delivery, while Matt Damon, [South African team captain, Francois Pienaar], over-invests at the gym having been given surprisingly little to say. The film ends up as a one dimensional, international rugby tournament, and the major themes – political, social and cultural – are all expressed through a rather narrow and frankly unimaginative sporting metaphor. Apartheid is barely touched on and Mandela's personal relationships with both Winnie and the rest of his family are confusing and disjointed. And yet there are moments when the film comes close to its potential: The team's visit to a black school in one of the townships; Damon's first meeting with Freeman, and the visit to Robben Island which is carefully enhanced by unusual camerawork. It's only Damon's response to an interviewer at the end of the match which comes close to giving a sense of magnitude to Mandela's achievements, but sadly the moment alone fails to save the movie from buckling under the weight of its own expectations. VERDICT: 6/10 Could – and should – have been so much better.

App of the month

Anti-social networking

THE social-networking fads of the moment are two applications that allow users to track down friends and other users wherever they are, whenever they are.

Foursquare and Gowalla are entirely location based apps, so naturally have spawned from the prevalence of GPS devices like the iPhone which can pinpoint your locality to the nearest nanometre or thereabouts. The services operate on the simple idea of checking in at designated places, of which users add themselves – as do their friends. This could be the train station, the pub, the supermarket or wherever.

There are a few differences between the two programmes, namely that Foursquare operates like a game – you check in places and score points, creating competition on a leaderboard for your local area. But you can also become the mayor of a location depending on how many times you've visited it, and when other people have checked in more times than you, you lose your mayorship. And 4sq (as it's also known) has the added fun of badges – there are oodles of badges to be won for doing certain activities: Staying out past 3am on a weekday wins you the School Night badge, for example

ALL SYSTEMS GO: screenshot of Gowalla app

Gowalla on the other hand lacks the competitive edge that Foursquare has. Badges are still present but called pins, and there are no mayorships and no leaderboard. Pins do have an added bit of fun as they are often attached to trips – they're as you would expect and consist of checking in at a set of locations consecutively to win the associated pin.

So how do these services fit into social networking and how are they at all useful? This is where the worry and controversy begins. Open up Foursquare on the iPhone and you're presented with a list of exactly where my group of friends are. Let me reiterate that, I know exactly where they are and they know exactly where I am. So it's weird, considering that I don't actually know many of these people in a physical sense, but merely through online communication. Dangerous, some might say. But most young people aren't bothered by this, and where the programmes become really indispensable is when you check in at the local pub and some of your friends are already listed as being there. It's instant socialising with no communication required.

working Akpo Sodje, who popped up at the far post to convert a delicious low ball from Reid, which reached him with his name on it. The decks were cleared, with 17 minutes remaining, for an all-out search for a winner. Only that wasn't quite how it worked out immediately.

Game as bibles, United fought back. Racon's careless foul on Scott Vernon gave Simon Francis the opportunity to bend a 20-yard free kick against the bar, Nicky Bailey heroically blocked Francis Laurent's point-blank attempt to force home the rebound, with the loose ball finally cleared amid the kind of mayhem normally found in a Tom and Jerry cartoon.

Charlton again lived dangerously when centre back Jean-Yves M'Voto wastefully headed Francis' inswinging corner over the bar.

before pinching all three points a minute into added time. Reid's blistering pace destroyed Southend's defensive cover as he moved on to Miguel Llera's cleverly lofted ball over the top, let fly on the run and found the bottom right corner.

The 2,297 visiting fans (Roots Hall's top travelling contingent this season) instantly howled for the summary termination of the six added minutes, which had been greeted with glee mere moments before. That's quite enough entertainment for the night, was their emotion-wracked reaction.

What seemed like hours previously, this rumbustious ding-dong sparked into life with the dismissal, for violent conduct, of United's central midfielder Jean-Francois Christophe, after an off-the-ball spat with Bailey.

Semedo's foul on Vernon prompted a tussle for the ball and Bailey's theatrical collapse, but Christophe's fingerprints

TEAMS

Charlton: [4-4-2]: Elliot, Richardson, Dailly, Llera, Jackson, Sam (Wagstaff, 86), Semedo (Reid, 61), Racon, Bailey, Mooney (McKenzie, 74), Akpo Sodje. Not used: Randolph, Shelvey, Sam Sodje, Solly.

were found all over him. Once the dust settled, with Bailey booked Francis' lethal free kick was brilliantly turned aside by Elliot, who added to the stunning save he'd previously made from Sanchez Watt's header. Shortly afterwards, unfortunately, Charlton's terrific young keeper's face was redder than his teammates' shirts.

Moving low to his right to deal with Paterson's speculative 25-yarder, Elliot inexplicably allowed the ball to squirm from his grasp and cross the line behind him despite his frantic efforts to retrieve the situation. Nobody inside Southend's battered stadium was more grateful for Reid's subsequent match-winning exploits and nobody deserved redemption more than the popular, home-grown Addick. The priority, meanwhile, must be to improve the Valley pitch in time for Stockport's visit next Saturday. It doesn't make sense for Charlton to

Brighton far too breezy

ON a flooded rice paddy of a pitch bearing no resemblance to the slick surface on which they despatched Yeovil three days previously, Charlton slumped to a dispiriting 2-1 defeat at the hands of a Brighton side superior to them in all departments, writes Kevin Nolan.

The conditions, following relentless rain, were the same for both sides but the tools which proved too much for Yeovil were effectively blunted to Albion's advantage. Speedy wide men Kyle Reid and Lloyd Sam, for instance, had wrecked the West Country visitors but were physically incapable of carrying the fight to the South Coasters in remotely the same way. The ball simply wouldn't do its bit for them as it had on Saturday, Charlton might not have beaten Brighton anyway - the Seagulls adapted admirably to the circumstances and passed their way crisply through them - but their chances were substantially reduced by the transformation of what is normally one of their assets. So why wasn't the pitch covered over the weekend, if that's not too economically naive a question? Cuts are inevitable, of course, but so are potentially false savings, included among which might be the decision, slipped quietly under the radar, to abandon reserve team football. The layman will reasonably query how you maintain an alert, strong squad if the fringe players lack opportunity to put pressure on the first team. How does Jonjo Shelvey force his way back into contention, how does Leon McKenzie achieve the match fitness we're told he lacks? The suspicion that Charlton have been penny wise, pound foolish will be dispelled only by promotion and those odds are lengthening. This defeat, meanwhile, needs reporting. Brighton scored from long range in each half. Inigo Calderon claimed the first, with a telling deflection off Frazer Richardson; the second belonged to Elliott Bennett, who returned Rob Elliot's poor clearance with interest. The Addicks failed to trouble Peter Brezovan until Akpo Sodje replied too late to matter.

by Kevin Nolan

ALREADY under sustained pressure in hanging on to the first half lead fortuitously given them by Matt Paterson, the last thing 10-man Southend needed was the 61st-minute arrival of Charlton's jet-heeled winger Kyel Reid in place of the more workmanlike virtues of holding midfielder Jose Semedo.

Phil Parkinson's shrewdly timed introduction of Reid was the straw that broke tiring United's back. He really does "know what he's doing" most of the time.

No doubt delighted to find the Roots Hall pitch in surprisingly first class condition, Reid tore up this game's script and wrote one of his own. Effectively hamstrung during the midweek loss to Brighton by The Valley's lifeless surface, he practically revelled in the firmer going and galvanised the Addicks into re-doubling their efforts to find an equaliser.

A minute after Reid joined them, David Mooney volleyed Frazer Richardson's accurate cross at Steve Mildenhall, then Reid himself cut in to test the busy keeper.

As Charlton turned the screw, Lloyd Sam's low cross set up Mooney to fire against the brave Mildenhall from 10 yards. It was threatening to be one of those nights for Charlton when Mooney blasted a good chance created by Thierry Racon's persistence over the angle of right post and bar. But the hyperactive Reid was not to be denied.

Too hot for the Shrimpers' exhausted defence to handle, he forced yet another fine save from Mildenhall, with Adam Barrett completing the clearance from under the crossbar.

The inevitable breakthrough was finally achieved by hard-
